A new branch of psychology emerged in the 1990s that examines how healthy minds remain resilient and flourish. "Positive psychology" has spawned various assessments; Gallup's StrengthsFinder 2.0, the most popular, is taken by 1.6 million employees every year in more than 400 of the Fortune 500 companies. Strengths-based assessments aim to increase engagement, job satisfaction, and productivity by helping companies design jobs that take advantage of their employees' best qualities.

This mystery reinforced his assumption that team building was an art, not a science. The truth is quite the opposite. At MIT's Human Dynamics Laboratory, we have identified the elusive group dynamics that characterize high-performing teams--those blessed with the energy, creativity, and shared commitment to far surpass other teams.

A proposal for a new way to understand cities and their design not as artifacts but as systems composed of flows and networks. In The New Science of Cities, Michael Batty suggests that to understand cities we must view them not simply as places in space but as systems of networks and flows. To understand space, he argues, we must understand flows, and to understand flows, we must understand ...
